

The American Psychological Association (APA) referencing style is often used in some social sciences including Education, Psychology and Sociology. Similarly to the Harvard Referencing Style it uses an author /date format when citing. Full details of sources used and cited during your research should be provided alphabetically in an ordered bibliography at the end of your document.

Note: If you are asked to use APA style for referencing purposes, please follow your department's specific recommendations.

Citing one author or more than one author:

When citing one author, the surname of the author and the year of publication should be put into the text at the point after the citation is made. When citing two to five authors use all names in the citation. For six or more authors, use et al.

Examples:

- One Author: e.g. Mankiw (1998)
